

Developing Learning Materials (Training Essentials)

The Training Essentials series focuses on issues in contemporary training. The books are comprehensive, setting out the theoretical background, while also providing practical guidance to meet the hands-on needs of training practitioners. The series features core reading for those working towards professional training qualifications and the competency requirements of the Training and Development Standards. This is a comprehensive guide to designing and preparing learning materials that are well-structured, succinctly written and produced in formats appropriate to the purpose of the training. It explains the key principles of designing and producing materials, and shows how to draw up specifications, establish criteria and select, adapt, develop and produce a variety of materials from text-based to new IT-based media.
