

Love haunts... Brin Maxwell once lived the ultimate rock-n-roll fantasy as the wife of the frontman for Hell's Fury. It all ended in a flash—literally—with a lightning bolt that took Max's life and left hers in suspended animation. Two years later she's ready to move on, but there's a stumbling block: her sanity. Max's ghost has decided to haunt her, and he's got a bad habit of showing up at the most inconvenient moments. Like when she's about to plant a long wet one on event planner David Lyle, the man she hopes will resurrect her love life. David is real, solid, and makes her heart do the tango. He's also curiously inept at his job—yet he has certain other talents that leave her wondering just what he's hiding in his shadowy past. Then there are the death threats. As they escalate from notes slipped under her door to full-scale, Kodak-moment terror, Brin realizes Max's return is no coincidence. And that the only one she can turn to is David. The man with the skills to save her life—unless he's there to take it... Warning: Contains strong language, violence, bad fake accents, and a fearless dog. May cause an overwhelming desire to put a lock on your underwear drawer.
