

Do you know someone who might be keeping a painful secret?TV & Film Screenwriter George A. Johnson was inspired to write "I Have A Secret" for young readers after learning that a close friend's child had been molested by a friend of the family. The boy had kept the incident a secret for several weeks before finally mustering the confidence to communicate what had happened to his parents. After seeing the pain that the child and his family endured, Johnson penned a simple, relatable story that parents can read to their young children if they suspect that a secret needs to come out (whether it involves an incident of molestation...or simply the neighbor's broken window). "I Have A Secret" is a relationship-building story that will help strengthen the bond of open communication between parents and their young children.
