

My God and Me: Listening, Learning and Growing on My Journey

Relationships change with the tide of life. When your relationships ebb more than flow, do you find yourself asking, Were my dying relationships ever real relationships? Are the people who maintain contact, but with whom there is no connection, worth holding on to? Should I expect a persons presence in my life to equal dependency in my time of need? Does the quality of interaction determine the level of importance? These questions and many more flow through the interactions shared in My God and Me: Listening, Learning and Growing on My Journey.
