

Damien Morrow has never fit anywhere. Not human and not quite Fae, he makes his life in New York as an artist, living on the edges of the human world and avoiding the Fae. Hes content with his life until she breaks into his studio. Until she challenges him to do more than live on the fringes. Eithne is a sylvan rathu, a master with a bow and sworn to protect the Lady of the Vale. When the Lady is taken, Eithne hunts down the last creature of Anwyn to come close to the borders of the Vale: a black griffin. What she finds is a solitary shapeshifter intent on living his life outside the realms, a man that arouses a longing in her she doesnt understand. But the Lady is missing, vanished behind the stone gates of Anwyn. Without her, the magic of the Fae realms will fade leaving only Death behind. Damien can go after her, but if he is caught, his fate will be something far, far worse because the Horned King of Anwyn wont stand for being robbed - again.
