After her husband, Robbie, dies in Afghanistan, Libby can't sleep or relax. But she has one-year-old baby Pearl and Grandpa who need her. When Libby receives money from Robbie's insurance policy, she knows she must do something good, something for the community. She buys the old bakery in downtown Centreville that has been closed for two years. Soon it is up and running and she can thank Kyle, the painter for her new outlook. Things are looking up and she is happy, knowing she has contributed to her town, to the people she loves.
